A horse owner at Clifton sent a young stableman to Paterson the other day to a doctor, as the young ster had complained of feeling ill He told the lad to go to the first doctor's house on Church street and have the bill charged up to him. The boy started out, and upon reaching the telegraphic order was received by the physician's house read, "Office hours, operator at a station directing a train 1 to 3." He did not go into the place, although it was the physician who was a friend of his employer and the place to which he was sent. The lad went next door, saw the doctor and returned to the track with a pint bottle of medicine. He happened to meet his boss in the betting ring and was asked, "Did you see the doctor I told you?" "No, sir. I went next door."

"Why so?" asked the horse owner. "Well, when I got to the house you spoke of, there was a board out 1 to 3, and looking next door there were better odds at 10 to 1, so I went in there."-Paterson Press.

Empty Titles.

We have heard of captains, majors, colonels, judges, professors, etc., until the whole thing has become a nuisance and almost intolerable. Do let us stop this nonsense and say for a time plain "mister." When men have once filled an office, it is courtesy to continue to address them as such-for instance, Judge Walker, Colonel Bowies, Colonel King, Captain Gantt, Captain Rumbley, etc. but do let us cease to give these titles to men who never held the offices a stranger would think they now or once filled. We do not know a single man in Evergreen who has, by reason of either present or past services, any claim to be addressed as professor, only two as captain and two as colonel.-Evergreen (Ala.)
